THE SENATE

(From the N. Y. Stockholder.)

The editor was right—we forget who it was—who said recently that there had never been at any time in our history a Senate of more dignity and ability than the present one. We are apt, laudatores temporis acti, to recur to the days of Clay and Webster, and their contemporaries, and to think that their departure made a void which we have not seen and shall not see filled. This is not true. The equals and superiors of those men in political ability and statesmanship sit in the Senate now. Mr. Conkling, as a dialectician, a debater, in his knowledge of constitutional law and political history, is not dwarfed by the recorded achievements or the traditions of Mr. Webster.

To be sure Mr. Webster on great occasions was an unmatched advocate. Moreover he had one great quality, which has made immortal some of his loftiest English, namely, imagination, the poet's power, informed with which some of his target periods the world will not soon let die.

But in his last and maturest years he and Mr. Clay also, were expectants of the Presidency. They are said to have died disappointed and embittered because they failed of that. There are perhaps a score of men now in the Senate who have risen or are rising to a better level than that—better Senators and Lonester Statesmen because they have passed the stage of Presidency-seeking and become nobler men than average Presidents.

Mr. Blaine, in his best efforts, does not fall behind Mr. Clay's highest flights of impassioned oratory. Last spring, at the extra session, when firm on his feet in the Senate, the full term ambassador of an equal State, he hurled bolts of fiery eloquence at the fergiversation of the new Presidential economical managers in the treatment of the freedmen, till Senate and galleries were roused to sympathetic cheers. It was a scene, to be remembered. The space in the senate behind the Senators' chairs was filled with dignitaries having the privilege of the floor, members of two Congresses, the coming and the going, Governors of States and strangers of all ranks and distinction. Those packed the Hall as never to the walls, and above them the galleries were overflowed with a vast audience which had gathered from all parts of the Union to witness the inauguration of a new administration and the exciting scenes which preceded it. There, many of them schooled to meet an Prosecutor chorus of forensic eloquence, were touched with a common thrill as the speaker's fervid words bore his high theme aloft.

Mr. Conkling followed in a speech which forebore to take sides against the untried administration, a speech remarkable for dignity poise and happiest of tone and phrase which enable an orator to move along the middle ground of a grave and exciting topic without being inane, timid or commonplace.

We are glad to see that the two gentlemen, acknowledged each rare gifts and so highly capable of good to the country, have reconciled the differences of their younger years, and stand side by side in common path of patriotism.

There was another notable incident this session, when Mr. Hamlin the senior of the Senate who believe—he was Senator thirty years ago this year—rose and in grave words stated the position and duties of Senators, and the duty of those who assumed to make public the doings of the Senate, in respect to a personal controversy which had recently arisen in debate. The dignity and weight of the Senior's remarks on this occasion made it plain why he has long commanded the influence which his fellow Senators have long accorded him, although one of the number not conspicuous in debate. We know no man, in the long list of common persons who have sat in the Senate for the thirty years since the government began, who could have better filled the foremost place in a scene of this dignified and affecting nature than did the Senator from Maine on the occasion referred to.

HARD ON THE SILVER BILL.

(In the Toledo Blade.)

The Silver bill which Bland is pushing places us here for several reasons. The Corners, largely composed of the debtor class. We are all in debt. That grasping Shylock, Bascom, has furnished us the necessaries of life these twenty years, and he kept on charging it up! when we didn't pay, with the remarkable necromancy of a fiend. Bascom wants his money, and Bascom is consequently a Shylock. He is a oppressor, and a grinder of the faces of the people. We would round up in our wrath and mob him, but that there ain't one in a while, he's credit enough for a bad whiskey in Lodiville, and so we have to endure him. Therefore when we heard of this silver bizzus we was rejoiced. If silver is made a legle-tender, and is only worth 92 cents on the dollar now, we hev, at least, rescued ourselves from the grasp of this mercenary ogre which wants his money, 5 per cent's worth anyhow. And we are satisfied it will go lower than that. But that graspin Bascom hez threwed a husband into the corners. Ez silver is at a discount on 8 per cent he has entered his whiskey just that amount. He sez if we want to pay him in debased currency we hev got to take debased liquor. That is an will hev to be killed yet."

THE SILVER BUBBLE.

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT OF A LEADING LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY—THE SILVER BILL AS A BORROW OF WIDOWS AND ORPHANS—ITS EFFECT UPON INSURANCE ASSETS.

The following letter presents the effects of the proposed silver legislation in a manner that the general public will readily understand and appreciate.

OFFICE OF THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1878.

To the Members of the Committee on Finance:

Gentlemen: In accordance with official duty, I ask your attention to the pending act of Congress, whereby it is proposed to make silver coin a legal tender for the payment of all debts, and also fixing upon an arbitrary basis its legal value considerably beyond its real or its commercial value.

If this company holds securities amounting to $85,000,000, which, at the present value of legal tender notes, are worth within 3 per cent of that sum in gold. On the contemplated resumption of specie payments, fixed by law at a year hence, they would be worth par in gold. At that period (1879) its assets should be about $20,000,000 at gold value.

Should the present bill become a law, and the public be obliged to receive a coin containing 412½ grains of silver, for a dollar, it would reduce the value of our securities, now worth 97 per cent, and over in gold to 92 per cent, striking off at a blow about $4,200,000 from our property, and if when resumption takes place about $7,200,000, provided the present price of silver is maintained.

As silver among most commercial nations is a merchantable commodity, and not a coin to any considerable extent, and as its value, like other such commodities, depends upon supply, demand, and the general laws of trade, its fluctuations will undoubtedly be, as in the past, frequent, and varying from 1 to 25 per cent, from a gold value. It is not a violent supposition in view of the already enormous annual product from our own mines and those of other countries, that it may, from time to time, reach the low relative value last mentioned. Should that be the case, and the company be obliged to take silver for its bonds, mortgages and stocks, it would reduce its assets to the extent of $20,000,000 and more.

As the strength of a chain is its weakest link, so the value of a dual currency of gold and silver is practically that of the least valuable medium. The public will pay their debts with that which is of the least value. This company is not owned by "rich stockholders" or "bloated bondholders." It has no capital stock, it issues no bonds, and those to be affected by the proposed legislation are persons scattered over the whole country, who hold policies aggregating $300,000,000, in sums on an average of not more than $3,000 each, payable at the death of the insured.

The millions of widows will be stripped if the Legal-tender bill passes in the present shapes will be mostly taken from the pittances of future widows and orphans, who will hold the policies when they mature.

While a currency of shifting value is injurious and annoying in all well-conducted business enterprises, it is far more so in ours, the basis and principles of which are fixed beyond our control, and as some of our contracts may remain in force for 50 years and more.

Under the pressure of this apprehended calamity, the effect of which, upon our present assets, it may not be possible to remedy, it becomes our duty to arrange our methods and forms of business for the future in such a manner as to free us, as far as practicable, from the vexations, if not disastrous effect of a fluctuating currency, should it be forced upon us.

As to future loans and the renewal of such as have already matured, it is suggested that this may be done lawfully by expressing in the contract or instrument of indebtedness executed to the company, whether bond and mortgage or other agreement, the kind or description of currency in which it is to be paid.

We could not properly make them payable in gold now, or until a general resumption takes place, unless we make our loans in gold. But as the premium paid for gold would be sunk at resumption, it would, to that extent, reduce the rate of interest received, and, therefore, would not be advisable.

To pay our currency and require gold would not be a violation under our rules, or in accordance with the principle of equity, independent of any possible question as to its legality.

As we loan United States bankers or greenbacks, it is so limited that the covenants for the payment of interest and principal to the company might be in greenbacks, if this shall be decreed by you safe and expedient, and unquestionably it is plain that the gold value of the same shall be equal at the time of payment to what it was at the time the transaction was made.

A law was passed at the session of the Legislature of this State in 1875, requiring that all State taxes should be paid in gold after the 1st of January, 1879. It has other features which should be examined. But we fear if the courts of this country of control the State of currency to be used in the payment of debts in this State, it might only be a partial remedy, inasmuch as a large portion of our revenue, especially from premiums, is derived from other States.

This subject of such magnitude and importance in its relation to the business of this company, as well as to the public interest, is respectfully commended to your early and earnest attention. Yours, obedient servant,

F. S. WINSTON, President.

LET US GIVE KENTUCKY A FLAG.

The Cincinnati Gazette of Saturday says: "The State of Kentucky does not own a national flag, and, with over $500,000 in the Treasury, there is opposition to buying one.

The question of hoisting the Stars and Stripes, which was debated in the Senate yesterday, turned principally on the point of economy. We are sure that if the matter were properly brought before the people of all the Union States a sufficient amount could be raised by subscription to adorn the flag-staff of the Kentucky Capitol with a handsome banner. Kentucky shall not want for a flag for lack of funds."

The Kennebec Journal of Tuesday says: "Nicholas Fessenden, Esq., of Fort Fairfield, arrived in the city last evening, by the Pullman train, bearing the official papers, showing the result of the recent investigation of the election in the Madawaska district. There will be no trouble in the report, as is foreshadowed in a dispatch received in this city yesterday afternoon, closing with these ominous words, 'The half has not been told.'"

The Lewiston Journal prints a portion of some remarks, apparently intended to have some reference to politics, made by Gen. J. L. Chamberlain in Boston last week and says: "Senator Blaine may be heard from in reply." After reading the remarks we are impelled to ask: In reply to what? Senator Blaine is not accustomed to kick at nothing.

Gen. B. F. Butler publishes an explicit denial of the N. Y. Herald story of his intention to introduce a resolution to investigate the election of President Hayes.

State Temperance Convention.

The several temperance organizations, the temperance workers, and all the friends of temperance in Maine, are invited to meet in mass convention, at Granite Hall, in Augusta, on Wednesday and Thursday, January 23d and 24th, commencing at 11 o'clock on Wednesday.

The temperance cause was never more prosperous in the State than now, for which we should be most profoundly grateful. Still there are important subjects which will demand our attention. Shall we ask for any change or amendments in the prohibitory law? Shall we protest against great glaring evils in the licensing liquors to the dregs? Shall we ask for any more stringent penalties to be inflicted upon persons found intoxicated? These and other important questions will doubtless demand the attention of the convention.

Let there be a general rally. The grand reduction of fares on the railroads may be expected.

TIME

Time is a hand reaching
I am a vessel in the sea
Time an eagle in the way
I am an owl upon its prey
I am an arrow aiming straight,
Mocking the pursuing skill
I am a net lived in by the fowler
I am a mere summer day
Smiling in a violet's play
I am a torrent rapid as a dream
I am a snow wreath in a room
Time is a long wave breaking
In a pure and quiet lake
Time is a mere summer day
Smiling in a violet's play
Time is a torrent rapid as a dream
I am a snow wreath in a room
Time is a long wave breaking

TONY'S CHRISTMAS TREE

[illegible]

If I were to try to tell you what a terrible mistake it was that our companionship gradually—for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robertson were both young and happy—I should suggest that you take Mr. Robertson and myself, and imagine yourselves in our place. Then, if you might be able to help judging, that the morning of our last quarrel, that saving you from a life of misery, I for one should be forever grateful.

Oh, love does not think such [illegible] are selfish!

Sorry to say I do very [illegible]. Have you happened to notice that Mister Tony has [illegible] Christmas [illegible] and [illegible] been heard of for weeks and people for miles round. Christmas eve.

Oh! my dear editor, I do have [illegible] the tightest [illegible] before. Often I always put this [illegible] when you know I can't. If to have [illegible] Mr. [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
